Proxies on Merger By Chamber Vanish

By ROBERT FROST

The mysterious disappearance of about 60 signed proxy ballots has heightened a bitter contest over the proposed merger of two of New York's oldest and most aristocratic business groups.

The proposal would join the 196-year-old Chamber of Commerce of New York with the 57-year-old Commerce and Industry Association of New York.

The rosters of the 1,500-member Chamber and the 3,000-member association read like a Who's Who of business in New York City.

With only five days remaining before the chamber votes on the proposal, the opposition, which quietly reported the disappearance to the police on Monday, was forced yesterday to send out a new proxy solicitation.

A representative of the Corporation Trust Company, which is serving as inspector for the vote, said the count could not be postponed beyond next Tuesday's scheduled meeting without the approval of the full chamber.

A spokesman for the dissident group, which opposes the merger, said, however, that if necessary the group would seek a way to delay the vote. Although he would not say how this would be done, he indicated that it would probably take the form of "floor strategy."

The ballots were said to have disappeared from the office of Elmer Hyde, a leading member of the opposition, at 55 Liberty Street. Mr. Hyde had been serving as the collection agent for the group.

Prior to the disappearance of the ballots, the signed proxies had last been seen by the dissidents on Friday afternoon at a strategy meeting held in Mr. Hyde's office.

At that time, according to a member of the opposition who attended the meeting, Mr. Hyde showed the group "several hundred signed proxies, which we believed were enough to defeat the measure."

Mr. Hyde was reported to have then placed the batch of ballots in his desk drawer, which he locked with one of two keys that opened the lock. One of the keys was kept by Mr. Hyde, while the other was believed to have been placed in an empty inkwell on his secretary's desk.

When Mr. Hyde returned to his office on Monday morning, he found the desk drawer opened and the spare key in the drawer.

Mr. Hyde, when reached by telephone, remained tight-lipped about the whole affair, saying only that between 50 and 60 signed proxies were missing and that he had reported the loss to the police.

The incident was kept under wraps by the opposition until yesterday when it sent out letters to George Champion, chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank and president of the chamber, and Walter F. Pease, a partner in the law firm of Searman & Sterling and chairman of the chamber's executive committee.

Mark Richardson, executive vice president of the chamber, said that he had heard about the missing proxies "through the grapevine in the lunchroom." The chamber's dining rooms are a well-known noon-hour gathering place for the city's business community.

The proposal to merge the two groups was the primary topic of discussion at the chamber's last three meetings. Following the last meeting on June 8, it was agreed that a feasibility study should be made of the proposal and a final vote taken Sept. 29.

The study, conducted by the management firm of McKinsey & Co., Inc., reported that while the merger might involve some changes and inconveniences, "it would appear that any possible disadvantages and difficulties would be outweighed by the promising potential of the merged organization."

The management report, which was dated Aug. 28, was sent to all members of the chamber with a new proxy ballot to vote "yes" or "no" on the merger. The report was accompanied by a letter signed by Mr. Champion and Mr. Pease, urging support of the merger.

The opposition, in turn, sent out a counter proxy ballot with only a "no" option. In its accompanying letter it charged that there had been some "recent outrageous actions of some chamber officers to coerce individual members of the chamber affiliated with corporate organizations to line up and vote for the merger in violation of their own conscience and views on the matter."

A two-thirds vote against the merger is needed to defeat the issue. A source close to developments in both camps indicated late yesterday that the voting had been "extremely close."

Mr. Champion said yesterday that his information indicated the merger "looks good." Mr. Pease concurred. The banker was one of the originators of the merger proposal.

Mr. Pease added that "we are willing to help the dissidents in any way we can with their new proxy, but they won't even talk with me."

The two main arguments of the opposition have been that the chamber would lose its effectiveness and identity as the oldest organization of its kind in the country and that the association has substantially less financial resources than it has.

The management report listed the chamber's assets as of Dec. 31 at $3,368,304, while the association was said to have assets of $461,839. The chamber also owns its own headquarters and has investments in various securities funds.

Mr. Pease, one of the leading proponents of the merger, asserted that "if the merger doesn't go through, the chamber is sure to lose some of its top people." Among the businessmen he mentioned was Jack

I. Straus, president of R. H. Macy & Co.

Mr. Pease asserted that for the last few years the chamber "has been standing still and could use about 100 to 200 more members right now." He described the association as an active and progressive group that would blend well with the chamber.

Proxy votes must be submitted to the Corporation Trust Company prior to Tuesday's meeting which will begin at 11:45 A. M. in the portrait-lined Great Hall at the chamber's headquarters, 65 Liberty Street.

Signed proxy ballots cast previously by members who did not vote in the latest solicitation will be included in the final tabulation.

Charles Garside, Lawyer, Dies; Ex-Head of Blue Cross in State

Trustee of State University
Led Antidiscrimination Panel
—Former Justice Was 66

Special to The New York Times

NORFOLK, Conn., Nov. 1—

Charles Garside, former president and chairman of the Associated Hospital Service of New York (Blue Cross) and former chairman of the New York State Commission Against Discrimination, died yesterday of a heart ailment in his country home, Cobble Hill Farm. He was 66 years old and lived at 1148 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Surviving are his widow, the former Helen Hunt Johnson; two sons, Charles Jr., associate professor of history at Yale, and Grenville of New York; a daughter, Mrs. Peter B. F. Randolph of Boston; a brother, George H. of Phoenix, Ariz., and four grandchildren.

Mr. Garside will be buried here tomorrow. A memorial service will be held Tuesday at 11 A. M. in Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, 316 East 88th Street, New York.

Served in Municipal Court

Mr. Garside, a lawyer had been a trustee and acting president of the State University of New York and Municipal Court justice. He served in both World Wars, having an important part in the procurement and delivery of medical and other supplies in the second conflict.

Mr. Garside, a pipe-smoking man with wavy gray hair, piercing eyes and close-cropped mustache, was known for calmness under the stresses that frequently arose during his public service.

Lincoln, he said in an interview, definitely influenced his life, especially his sense of responsibility as chairman of the State Commission Against Discrimination.

Mr. Garside was born in Middletown, Conn. He received a bachelor's degree from Princeton University in 1932, with honors in history and politics, and a law degree from Cornell University. He held honorary degrees from Hobart College and Alfred University.

He enlisted as a private in the Marine Corps in World War I.

Mr. Garside was an associate in the New York law firm of Choate, Larocque & Mitchell from 1923 to 1927 and a partner from 1927 to 1934.

Active as Young Republican

As a young man he was active in the Young Republican movement. He served on the New York County Republican law committee and as vice president of the New York Young Republican Club.

He was a Republican Presidential elector in 1932 and chairman of the Young Republican Committee for changing the county leadership in 1933.

In January, 1934, Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia appointed Mr. Garside a Municipal Court justice, and he was elected to the full 10-year term in the fall of the year.

Ninety per cent of the justices of the Municipal Court are "honest, conscientious and hard working," and most of the lawyers appearing before the court speak shocking English, he said in a speech.

"It was a poor man's court," he recalled, "and it brought me in touch with the problems of the people of this city."

Mr. Garside resigned from the bench in 1936 to become a partner in the law firm of Webster & Garside. He also became a director of the Harsco Corporation.

In World War II he served as a colonel on the Army General Staff. As director of the International division of the Medical Department Supply Service, he supervised delivery of medical supplies and hospital equipment throughout the world under the lend-lease program. In 1943 he was a member of the Army Quinine Mission to Central and South American countries.

The following year Colonel Garside became assistant director of purchases for the Army Service Forces. He later was a member of the joint Army-Navy Board for training-unit contracts, and supervised for the Army its contractual relations with the colleges and universities of the nation.

After returning to his law practice in 1946, Mr. Garside ran for Congress against Representative Charles A. Buckley, Bronx Democrat, in the 25th District, and narrowly lost.

In April, 1947, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey appointed Mr. Garside chairman of the State Commission against Discrimination.

Mr. Dewey named him a trustee of the newly created State University the following year. Mr. Garside headed the committee on medical education centers, which led to the founding of the Downstate and Upstate Medical Centers in Brooklyn and Rochester.

After widening employment opportunities for members of minority racial and religious groups in New York State, Mr.

Charles Garside

Garside resigned as antidiscrimination chairman to devote himself to the practice of law in July, 1949. Mr. Dewey said he had been "a great chairman."

Later in 1949 Mr. Garside served on the fact-finding board appointed by Edward Corsi, New York State Industrial Commissioner, that settled the Bell Aircraft Corporation strike in Buffalo after several incidents of violence.

In July, 1950, Mr. Garside was elected president of the Associated Hospital Service of New York.

In 1951-52 he also served as acting head of the State University.

In December, 1952, Mr. Garside became chairman as well as president of the Associated Hospital Service. He obtained rate increases, but usually contended that they were inadequate. He resigned for reasons of health in 1959.

Also Taught at Columbia

Dr. Henry W. Cave, a surgeon who had practiced in New York for many years and had as his patients a number of prominent persons, died yesterday at his home, 950 Park Avenue. He was 76 years old.

Dr. Cave was associated throughout most of his career with Roosevelt Hospital. He was chief of that hospital's First Surgical Division from 1933 until 1953, and then was elected a life trustee.

From 1945 until 1953 he was Clinical Professor of Surgery at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University. In 1950 he was elected president of the American College of Surgeons, of which he had been a regent and a member of the advisory board.

A past president of the New York Surgical Society, Dr. Cave also had been vice president and trustee of the New York Academy of Medicine and a founder diplomate in 1937 of the American Board of Surgery. He belonged to the American and the Southern Surgical Associations.

Held Professional Honors

Dr. Cave was installed in 1954 as an honorary fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons in Edinburgh, Scotland. He also was an honorary fellow of the Royal Society of Medicine in London and a member of L'Académie de Chirurgie in Paris. He held honorary degrees from the University of Kentucky and Centre College, where he received his academic degree in 1909.

While president of the American College of Surgeons, he was honored at a testimonial dinner given by the Harlem Surgical Society for his work toward gaining admission to the college of qualified Negro surgeons.

A native of Paducah, Ky., Dr. Cave received his medical degree at the Johns Hopkins University in 1913. After serving his internship there, he studied in Frankfurt, Germany, for six months. In 1917, he completed a two-year internship in surgery and gynecology at Roosevelt Hospital. During World War I he served in the Army Medical Corps with the American Expeditionary Force.

The operation, for ulcerative colitis, involved the removal of the entire colon. Patients described the altered digestive tract as an improvement over nature.

In World War II, Dr. Cave was head of a War Manpower Commission group that determined which physicians in New York and neighboring states should serve in the armed forces.

Dr. Cave was a former president of the University Club and belonged also to the Century Club.

Surviving are his widow, the former Mary Thompson; three daughters, Mrs. Nina Cave Devine, Mrs. Ann Cave Montgomery and Miss Mary Cave, and seven grandchildren.

W. R. Lewis, Princeton Inn Host

Special to the Herald Tribune
PRINCETON, N. J.

William R. (Buster) Lewis, host to thousands of Princeton University students and alumni for more than 30 years, died yesterday of cancer in University Hospital, Philadelphia.

Mr. Lewis was owner of the Nassau Inn from 1920 to 1937. "The Nass," in addition to its reputation as a rendezvous for undergraduate conviviality, had a rich Colonial history as the principal stopping-off place on the stagecoach route between New York and Philadelphia.

In the 18th Century the inn was known as the "Sign of the College." The trustees of Princeton, then known as the College of New Jersey, held their commencement dinners there, and on several occasions during the Revolutionary period, the infant Congress used the building for its meetings. Washington Irving and James K. Paulding laid the scene of their "Lay of the Scottish Fiddler" in the Nassau Inn taproom.

A native of Hopewell, N. J., Mr. Lewis took over ownership of "The Nass" in 1920. In 1937, he relinquished the ownership to Princeton Municipal Improvement Inc., the organization of Edward Palmer, a Princeton University trustee and board chairman of the New Jersey Zinc Co.

Mr. Palmer transformed the square on Nassau St. into what later became the $4.5 million Palmer Square, 25 buildings, stores, and a theater, constructed along Colonial lines.

A new Nassau Tavern on Palmer Square replaced "The Nass" and Mr. Lewis was named its manager. He held the post until 1950, when he retired. He retained his residence at 30 Nassau St.

As a fixture at "The Nass" and later at the Tavern, Mr. Lewis was known as "Buster" to thousands of Princetonians who visited both establishments. The class of 1912 named him an honorary member.

He was also a borough councilman, and for a short time during World War II, president of the Borough Council of Princeton. His wife, the former Mrs. Emma Johnson Lewis, died some years ago. Several nieces and nephews survive.

A funeral service will be held tomorrow at 2 p.m. at the Princeton University Chapel.

Frederic W. Ecker Dies, 67

2/25/64

Frederic W. Ecker signing one of the recent Metropolitan Life Insurance Company's annual statements.

Retired Board Chairman Of the Metropolitan Life

Special to the Herald Tribune

NAPLES, Fla.

Frederic W. Ecker, 67, retired board chairman and president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.—the world's largest—died of a heart attack yesterday while on a Florida vacation. His office was in New York, his home in Greenwich, Conn.

Among his survivors are his 96-year-old father, Frederick H. Ecker, of New York, who joined the Metropolitan in 1883 and also served as chairman and president before he was named honorary chairman in 1951.

To help distinguish himself from his father, Frederic W. Ecker dropped the letter k from the end of his first name, while the elder Ecker spelled it in the more conventional way.

BEGINNING

A man of broad interests in business, civic, charitable and governmental fields in New York and the nation, Frederic W. Ecker joined the Metropolitan in 1925, and through much of his career was concerned with the firm's investments—a field in which he became known as an authority.

With Metropolitan, he began as an assistant treasurer and became treasurer in 1931, vice president in 1936, financial vice-president in 1944 after an interval for government service in World War II. He became executive vice-president in 1951, president in 1953 and board chairman in 1959.

Mr. Ecker retired as board chairman on March 31, 1963, but continued as a board member until his death.

Frederic Worrall Ecker was born in Brooklyn on March 25, 1896. His mother was Mrs. Henrietta Worrall Harris Ecker. He was educated at Pomfret (Conn.) School and at Harvard University, majoring in economics and receiving his A. B. degree with the class of 1918.

In World War I, he served overseas as a lieutenant in infantry and was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross and French Croix de Guerre.

In New York in 1919, Mr. Ecker began as a banking house clerk, then served Bankers Trust Co. as a securities salesman before transferring to Metropolitan.

INVESTMENTS

During his years with the insurance firm, he became known as a keen student of the way that huge insurance company investments could affect the national and even international economies.

In World War II, he headed a Lend-Lease mission to India and had the ticklish assignment of explaining to the sensitive Indians that American donations to the war effort were not foot-in-the-door instruments of dollar diplomacy.

Mr. Ecker was formerly chairman and director of the Institute of Life Insurance. He was a member of the executive committee of the American Life Convention, of the joint board of the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, and of the National Industrial Conference Board. He was a director of the Health Insurance Association of America, the Chase Manhattan Bank, and American Cancer Society. He was a trustee of the China Medical Board of New York, and of the Committee for Economic Development.

One of his most absorbing interests for many years was the Children's Village in Dobbs Ferry, N. Y. At his death, he was chairman of the school, which provides protective care and training for underprivileged boys.

He also had been insurance committee chairman of the People-to-People program set up by former President Eisenhower to try to improve relations with other countries through contacts at the personal level.

CLUBS

His clubs were the Harvard, in New York and Boston; The Links, Round Hill and Blind Brook, in the New York area.

Surviving, in addition to his father, are his wife, Mrs. Barbara Hoyt Ecker, of Greenwich, Conn.; and four sons—Frederic W. Ecker jr., of Seattle; Hoyt Ecker, of Weston, Mass.; and John Ecker and David Ecker, of Greenwich. Also, 13 grandchildren.

There will be a private funeral service at the family home at 155 Taconic Road, in Greenwich. A memorial service will be held later in New York at a time and place to be announced.
